years as a banker, MORSE MADE THE ASTONISHING DECLARATION THAT HE HAD NEVER READ ANY OF THE PRINTED BLANKS FURNISHED BY THE COMPTROLLER, ALTHOUGH AS A DIRECTOR HE HAD SIGNED SCORES OF THEM. He said he didn't know anything about the contents of Comptrollers' blanks or their requirements.

Stimson's purpose in bringing this out was soon made pialn. He showed that in November, 1996, Morse signed a statement for the Comptroller, in which his debts to the bank were set forth as amounting to $104,444.12, when by his own admission at that very moment he owed $180,000 on the Whitting loan, the ownership of which he has many times acknowledged, in addition to loans to J. F. Elliott, amounting to $25,000 and the Arizona Smelters Company for $14,000.

Other Discrepancies.

Similar discrepancies between other reports and Morse s real liabilities were shown, one after another, by Stimson. For example in September, 1907, he was credited with owing the bank only $18,000. To answer such seemingly pialn examples of "false and mission and decided that the Whitting loans could not properly be included offer but two excuses—poor memory and ignorance of the rules.
